

Photography by Clark Berry

GIBSON POND PARK

241 GIBSON RD., LEXINGTON

Gibson Pond Park has a rich history in the Lexington community. The pond is fed by Twelve Mile Creek and was once a site for gristmills, sawmills, and a small cotton mill. Formerly known as George's Pond, the property was purchased from the George family by Murray Gibson in 1943. For nearly 30 years, Gibson Pond was a community recreational area, featuring a pavilion known as "the best dance hall in the county," picnic tables, swimming, fishing, canoeing, paddleboats, camping and rental cabins. The property was closed to the public in 1972, but in 2007 the Town of Lexington redeveloped Gibson Pond into a park to allow the public to enjoy it once again.

The Town of Lexington has worked diligently to bring the park back to life, including recent repairs after the 2015 flooding. Bring the family (and the dog) and enjoy the updated park in this beautiful fall weather.

